PLAYS CHOSEN PANNED HARD, ACTORS GOOD

Criticism Laid On Thick At Junior Farmers'
Festival

ACTING GETS PRAISE

Praising the acting, but condemning the choice of plays, James E. Dean, of Central Technical school staff, Toronto, acting as adjudicator, awarded the decision to Unionville club in the third annual drama festival held by York County Junior Farmers Association.

The plays were presented at Pickering College Monday and Tuesday evenings. There were six one-act plays.

The adjudicator evidently did not allow his own likes and dislikes to creep into the award, for the Canadian play, "Coercion," to which he gave the decision, had received his condemnation as a propaganda play with whose propaganda he did not agree.

Two clubs were tied for second place, Nobleton with "Trysting Place," and Stouffville with "Squaring It With the Boss." Both Stouffville and Poplar Bank put on first-class performances, although they are new and small clubs with limited resources to draw upon. In fact, this reporter

SOFTBALL MEET IS CALLED FOR MONDAY NIGHT

All Interested In Mush-
Ball Asked To Be Present

WILL ELECT OFFICERS

"Play ball!" From present signs, it will not be long before the battle cry of the Newmarket Redmen will be echoing across the softball grounds.

The annual meeting of the Newmarket Softball association will be held on Monday at 8 p.m. in the King George hotel.

The election of officers will be held at this meeting, and plans for the coming season will be discussed. All those interested, whether it be from the players', the executives' or the fan's point of view, are urged to be present.

The Simcoe softball group will be meeting shortly, after which definite plans for a league can be drawn up. The Era learns.

Most of the members of last year's team are still on hand, and a flock of first-class material from the four-team town league is ready and willing to fill in any gaps that may occur in the ranks of the Redmen.

In other words, softball prospects in Newmarket were never brighter. Aurora and Mount Albert please note.

LACROSSE TEAM PROPOSED HERE

Lacrosse players and fans will be glad to hear of the meeting on Friday night at 8.15 p.m. in the council chambers, above the fire hall, to organize a junior team to compete in a proposed group consisting of Newmarket, Sutton, Aurora and Richmond Hill in the Ontario amateur lacrosse association.

Newmarket's lacrosse prospects are bright, and if adequate support can be obtained at this meeting and sufficient interest shown by prospective players, then Newmarket can be counted to go places in any league, it is felt.

All interested in the forming of a junior lacrosse team are asked to attend the meeting tomorrow night.

BROUGHT FIRST CREAMER HERE

Mrs. E. A. Graves, 70 On Sunday, Recalls Early Days

Mrs. E. A. Graves, famed for her singing in earlier days, will celebrate her 70th birthday on Sunday at her home on Millard Ave., Newmarket.

Mrs. Graves was born in North Gwillimbury, about a mile from Keswick. She was the daughter of John Prosser and Lucretia Eams. She is the oldest living member of the family, which includes her brothers, Will Prosser of Keswick and Leslie Prosser who is on the Mullock farm.

Orchard Beach was "a lonesome place," when Mrs. Graves was a schoolgirl, with only a few log dwellings. She recalled their family physician, Dr. E. Montgomery, whom they paid by the year.

Her husband, Robert Graves, who died Mar. 21, 1932, had the first cream separator in the district.

"We saw it advertised," Mrs. Graves told The Era, "and sent away for it. It was a wonderful thing in those days and many people came to our farm to see it operate."

"I've had a happy life," she continued. "And I've nothing to regret. I believe folks worked harder, years ago, than they do now, and they were more contented. People nowadays want to be 'somebody' and aren't satisfied to be themselves."

"When I had finished my work in the house, I used to go out to the fields to help my husband," Mrs. Graves concluded.

Mrs. Graves has lived in Newmarket since she and her husband left the farm 11 years ago.

Mayor Declares Now Is Time To Improve Home For Economy

"As mayor of Newmarket I heartily commend the Home Improvement Plan," Dr. S. J. Boyd, mayor, declares in a statement issued this week. "It is a dominion-wide scheme endorsed and assisted by the federal government."

"To improve your home this summer will be the vogue in Newmarket and throughout all Canada."

"The cost of nails, paints, lumber, shingles, and all building material is sure to go higher. The shrewd property-owner will hasten to get his repairs and improvements made before the cost of doing so gets too high."

"With every owner over all Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific spending even a small amount of money to improve his property or buy some furnishings for the home, it is bound to provide work and improve the labor situation greatly.

"For people who have a good job and wish to borrow a little money from the bank which they can pay back in equal monthly instalments, now is the time to do it, for the interest you will pay will be more than offset by the increased cost of materials if you postpone your improvements until next year or the year after."

"If citizens will co-operate with the relief board, and get in touch with Thomas Hall, phone 108, when you want a man to do odd jobs, it will greatly relieve our relief costs and tend to lower taxes another year."

Pupils Will Get Souvenirs If Council Approves Plans

Committee Would Spend Money On Children,
Not On Float

Keeping within the $25 termed by Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd at last week's council meeting as the "outside figure" to be spent on Newmarket's observation of the coronation, proved a tough problem for the representatives of local organizations who met with Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale and Councillors Arthur Evans and A. V. Higginson at the council chambers on Thursday to consider how Newmarket should celebrate the crowning of King George VI.

"I think the money should be spent with the object of giving some tangible remembrance of the occasion to the children, rather than on a float," one member of the committee stated.

The committee was in agreement on this point and a resolution was drafted that, "instead of

Salvationist Tells Of Life Among Tribe Of Criminals

Strange Complaint Of Tribes

"There are about 150,000 people in the criminal tribes of India," Adjutant A. D. MacTavish of the Salvation Army, Newmarket, told the Lions on Monday evening. President Fred Lundy was in the chair. R. C. Morrison introduced the speaker.

"Every man, woman and child in these tribes is a criminal," Adjutant MacTavish said. "They are finger-printed and are not allowed to move about the country like other natives. They are kept in settlements. Some of these people are highway robbers, some are jewel thieves, some are train thieves. I have been working among these people for a number of years."

"Indian women travel with all their jewelry loaded on their ears. These thieves would cut the jewelry from a woman's ear and jump off the train. After a crime a native might run for a day and a half. There is no chance of recovering what they steal."

"In one tribe in which I worked every man had blood on his hands, yet only one man in that tribe ever was convicted of murder."

"On one occasion the police found a green goatskin in a house in the settlement. The police officer was high caste and he would not touch a goatskin. So he made the woman of the house pick up the new skin and march with it to headquarters. He kept his eye on her all the time but when they got to headquarters it was found that she had in some mysterious way substituted an old goatskin for the green one. How was it done? No one knows."

"We are making some progress. We have some of them as con-

W. I. STARTED SCHOOL MUSIC

Credit For East Gwillimbury
School Music Shared
By Institute

Editor, The Era: On reading a short editorial in your paper last week in regard to music in the schools in East Gwillimbury, they have every reason to be proud of the pioneer work that has been done with music in the schools by Miss Marie Draper, who with the assistance of Mount Albert Women's Institute was able to commence this splendid work in five of the schools in the community. The Institute has paid half of the cost and is still helping some of them. Others have seen the good work done and the sections are standing behind the trustees in paying their own costs. This good work was started about four years ago and like many other very fine things fostered by the Women's Institute has spread nearly all over the township, and we sincerely hope that it will soon be taught in every school in our province.

MOUNT ALBERT.

Editor, The Era: I, having read the article "Music in Schools," would like to tell just how music in the schools of East Gwillimbury did originate.

Miss Marie Draper, the real pioneer of this project, received permission to address the Women's Institute at their June 26, 1933, meeting, on the advisability of having sight singing taught in the five public schools of the township.

The Institute members, always on the alert for practical suggestions for character, culture and citizenship building, were immediately interested in this new idea and decided to pay half the expense. A committee were appointed, and this procedure has been repeated every year, to meet with the trustees of the respective schools and find out if they were in favor of promoting this scheme of music in the schools, and taught by Miss Draper.

The trustees did co-operate, though not all five always throughout the intervening years, and deserve commendation, but the Women's Institute, the promoters, would like their share in the work recognized as well.

Has Three Great-Grandmas Two Mark Birthdays Friday

Mrs. Elijah Rose Has Lived
In Town Since 1915,
Marks Birthday

By Bea Westcott

A few hens and a canary are the chief care of Mrs. Elijah Rose, 38 Millard Avenue, who celebrates her 87th birthday tomorrow.

"My hens all know me," she told The Era, "but the rooster struts around and does not know me so well."

Mrs. Rose is still amazingly young. She knitted five pairs of socks this winter for her son. She hears and sees very well and thoroughly enjoys young company. She does all the cooking for herself and her daughter, Mrs. Garnet Boyd, who lives with her.

Born in Reach township, near Utica, Mrs. Rose was Mary Ann, daughter of Charles and Mary Mitchell. She married Elijah Rose 62 years ago in Uxbridge and they lived in and around the village of Uxbridge until 24 years ago.

They farmed on Yonge St. for two years, retiring to Newmarket in 1915. Mr. Rose died at the age of 79 in 1929.

Four of their six children are living. Lonso Rose of Newmarket, Mrs. Garnet Boyd, who lives with her mother, Mrs. Robert Pinder of Newtonbrook and Mrs. Hugh Byrne of Temiskaming, Quebec. Mable, Mrs. William Davies, died ten years ago, and Bert Rose died in 1931.

There are twelve grandchildren and one great granddaughter, Patricia Ann Pinder, who was named after her. This four-months-old little girl has three great-grandmothers, two of them celebrating their birthdays tomorrow. Mrs. Sophia Pinder of Newtonbrook will be 76 on the day that Mrs. Rose is 87. Mrs.

PUCK-CHASERS GIVEN BANQUET

Sutton Greenshirts, 1937 intermediate "B" semi-finalists, were tendered a banquet by the town fathers of the municipality in the United church hall on Wednesday evening.

Presentation of watches, wind-breakers and toilet sets to the members of the team, followed the dinner provided by the ladies of the church.

After the banquet, everyone journeyed to the town hall, where a most enjoyable dance proceeded on into the small hours of this morning.

W. P. Mulock, M.P. for North York, was in attendance.

Edith Cochrane of Toronto, the third great-grandmother, is 78 years old.

"Life is still fun," Mrs. Rose says. She laughed when her daughters mentioned how she loved to listen to the dance music over the radio and to get up and waltz around the house. "There is no use in getting cross and I never had to smack the children very much," Mrs. Rose said. "They always minded me, and I never had any trouble with them." Her daughters still marvel at her wonderful disposition.

"There was no cigarette smoking when I was younger, and I do not like to see it," Mrs. Rose said, "but they seem to enjoy it."

Mrs. Robert Pinder, Mrs. Clarence Pinder, Mrs. Wallace Pinder and little Patsy, all of Newtonbrook, were up for the birthday celebrations on Tuesday, and Mrs. Hugh Byrne of Temiskaming will also be with her mother.

HOME IMPROVEMENT PLAN

The federal government's home improvement plan, launched locally last week, is likely to be a real stimulant of prosperity. The loan plan, providing for instalment re-payment of loans from the chartered banks, is only part of the general plan to get building under way. It is expected that there will be a great deal more building carried on by those who do not need to borrow than by those who borrow. It is expected that the improvement campaign will be contagious.

OLD HOME WEEK

Among Ontario towns planning old home weeks this year are Bowmanville, Orillia and Picton. For Picton the homecoming will mark the town's centenary. Another year we hope that Newmarket may be among the old home week towns. It is not too soon to appoint a committee to assure a really successful reunion. Committee members could visit other towns holding reunions this year and make use of their best ideas. It is never too early to plan.

TOWNS WITHOUT BANDS

Two of Ontario's towns seem to be losing their bands, and what is a town without a band? Unhappy indeed! But a town with two bands, a brass band and a bugle band, is happy indeed! Godrich lost its band recently when the leaders resigned, discouraged by lack of support. Now the Orillia kiltie band, which visited Newmarket, is about to break up. The town cut its annual grant from $1,000 to $750, and the bandsmen felt that it would not be possible for them to carry on. If Orillia's old home week materializes, we think Orillia will have a band.

CENTRAL ONTARIO HIGHWAY

The reason that there is no provincial highway between Orangeville and Peterboro is that there has been no demand for this route. And there will be no highway until there is an insistent demand for one. Already all the municipal councils in the affected area, including Newmarket town council, have passed resolutions asking for this route, but there must be an even greater demand to command the interest and attention of the highways department. A glance at the map shows how logical this proposed highway is, and what a convenience it would be to tourists and to the half million people who would be served by it. A mid-Ontario route from Lake Huron to Ottawa is logical and necessary. Newmarket could very well take a leading role by calling a public meeting here to discuss the project.

A-TRAVELLING

The writer of these columns has been attending the two-day convention of the Ontario-Quebec division of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association. The first day was at London and consisted of speeches, discussions and business. The second day's business was to visit the farm home of Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn near St. Thomas. Frankly, we had a very enjoyable time, and here follows an attempt to pass along a little of the enjoyable experiences minus a rather tedious train journey.

Grand River Troubles

Arriving by train late at night we saved taxi fare by walking the two or three blocks to the hotel. London is one of the most impressive of Ontario's smaller cities. Some of the thoroughfares are wonderfully wide, even as wide as the pavements of the Canadian prairie cities, and so unlike Newmarket's cosy little Main St. In one of the interesting addresses of Friday morning W. H. Porter, editor of the Farmers' Advocate, asked the publishers to support the cause of conservation of forests and swamp lands and their restoration where necessary so as to prevent terrific floods in the spring and dry river-beds in mid-summer with consequent unfortunate effects on agriculture and climate. We heard more on this subject later in the day from Hugh Templin, editor of the Fergus News-Record, who has written about a million dollars worth of conservation editorials about the Grand River, which almost washes his presses in the spring and barely trickles by in August. The public purse is likely to provide the million dollars to restore balance to the Grand by means of a headwater reservoir.

Drummond's Poems

In the evening Dr. Sherwood Fox, president of the University of Western Ontario, told of a summer school which his university maintains at Trois Pistoles on the south bank of the mighty St. Lawrence. The purpose of the school is to enable students at Western to learn to speak French. Dr. Fox said that Dr. Drummond's charming poems have broadcast the unfortunate impression that the language of Quebec is a patois, whereas Andre Siegfried, the distinguished French writer, in a recent volume declares that the language of Quebec is a very good provincial French and that the language of Quebec's cities is a very pure French with the exception of some Anglicisms. Dr. Fox spoke of the two "elements" in Canada's population, for French and English are really the same race, he said. At any rate, it was interesting to learn of this school and the work it is doing to promote understanding between the people of Quebec and Ontario.

As She Is Spoke

After all, the intolerance of French so frequently expressed in Toronto is probably not general throughout this province. Most of us like to toy with the idea that we can speak a few words of French, and most of us like to hear the beautiful French language spoken occasionally even if we cannot understand much. That brings us to a remark made by Arthur Ford, managing director of the London Free Press, in introducing Dr. Fox, that if he wishes to know what the people of Ontario are really thinking he looks at the weekly newspapers, and not at the Toronto dailies. We are glad to say that no one can tell what the people of Ontario think by reading our editorials. We try not to waste space on those of our opinions with which most people agree, but to devote our editorial columns to the promotion of ideas, in our opinion sound and worth-while, but not generally accepted.

Peter's Pets

And so we come to Bannockburn farm. Hon. Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture, was there to welcome us. The strike situation at Oshawa kept Mr. Hepburn away. Mr. Marshall showed us through the barns and explained the horses, cows and pigs. Young Peter and his little sister were not in evidence, but one of the farm hands put on a wild west show, letting Peter's pony throw him several times. Mr. Marshall described another of Peter's pets as a jackass. Some of the publishers thought it was a burro. What's the difference?

The Scotch Pronunciation

Ten teams of perfectly matched horses were paraded before us. Only one team were valuable thoroughbreds, but all the teams were handsome. Mr. Marshall explained that Mr. Hepburn has a theory that the teamsters take more pride in well-matched horses. Each man has his own team to care for. There are 35 horses on the farm. Mr. Hepburn has about 800 acres, of which he inherited about 200 acres including the beautiful home in which he lives. Until he went into politics Mr. Hepburn's name was pronounced "Hebrun," but the world pronounced the "p" and his neighbors have done likewise.

Swamp Reclamation

A part of Mr. Hepburn's farming is done on shares with Russians, as is the custom in that part of Ontario. The farmer provides the horses for plowing, and the seed. Mr. Marshall told us of a swamp which Mr. Hepburn had reclaimed and in which, we believe, he is growing Spanish onions. The writer asked Mr. Marshall if this swamp was one of those whose disappearance the conservationist deplors. Mr. Marshall said not, and added that a lot of the conservation talk about swamps is so much "moonshine." An interesting point is that Mr. Hepburn had quite a few disappointments when he first went into onions. Ontario grown Spanish onion seed gave him poor results, including a good many twin onions, and he found it necessary to obtain his seed direct from Spain. Mr. Marshall suggested that the present disturbances in Spain might interfere with the purchase of seed this year.

Onion Storage

Mr. Marshall showed us the cool-storage (well ventilated, not refrigerated) house where onions and other vegetables are kept. The onions first go through the grader, dividing them into various sizes and then are bagged. Onion-growing has proved very profitable to Mr. Hepburn, the minister of agriculture told us.

Curly Flags

Then we saw the Yorkshires. Every tail has a curl in it, the minister pointed out. That, he said, is the sign of health; when a pig's "flag" goes down there is something the matter with him. He pointed out two or three sows with drooping straight tails. In his opinion their litters had run them down and they probably needed minerals. Mr. Hepburn believes in feeding his milk to the hogs after selling the cream. Do hogs pay, the writer asked Mr. Marshall. Oh, there's good money in hogs at ten cents, was the emphatic reply. Would Mr. Hepburn keep an exact record of the value of the milk he feeds his pigs to see if he is really making money, the writer asked. Oh yes, Mr. Marshall replied.

A Beef Experiment

The next thing we learned about Mr. Hepburn's farming operations is that he breeds Holstein cows with an Aberdeen-Angus sire for beef purposes. An idea of the premier's own, although others are doing the same thing, Mr. Marshall told us. The herd is maintained through the purchase of two-year-old Holstein heifers. The calves resemble the Aberdeen-Angus closely, and lack horns. The Aberdeen-Angus is very "impressive," according to Mr. Marshall, that is, the Aberdeen-Angus characteristics are dominant over the Holstein characteristics. It is quite an advantage, is it not, for beef cattle to be hornless, the writer questioned the minister. A distinct advantage, he replied, as sellers will in the future be docked a dollar an animal for horns. But it is a simple matter to dehorn a calf, he stated; a little caustic soda will prevent the growth of horns.

A Capable Manager

Two points Mr. Marshall emphasized: first, that Mr. Hepburn's heart is in his farm rather than in politics; second, when Mr. Hepburn is away he has an extremely capable manager in Mrs. Hepburn. She gives the orders in Mr. Hepburn's absence. There is nothing that goes on at the farm that Mrs. Hepburn does not know all about. We are not sure how many men are employed on the farm; we believe it is 15 or 20, in addition to the men growing crops in the summer time on shares with the premier. There is a foreman in charge. Mr. Marshall said that when Mr. Hepburn phones his wife from Toronto each morning he is away she is able to tell him every detail about the farm.

And Hostess

We learned more of Mrs. Hepburn's ability when we visited her lovely home, 92 of us in all, and were served with a substantial hot dinner, buffet style, within the space of one hour and five minutes, as timed by Mr. Marshall. The Hepburn home is attractively and tastefully furnished, just about the loveliest farm home you could wish to see. The only change Mr. Hepburn has made to the outside of the house since his father's time is the addition of a sun-porch. It is the house in which he was born.

Composed And Charming

Mrs. Hepburn is charming, and made a charming speech to her guests. She is young and attractive and did not seem the least bit worried about the handling of so many visitors. She explained that her husband had planned to be there, but that the strike situation at Oshawa had detained him.

A Real Farmer

We came away with the impression that Mr. Hepburn is a bona fide farmer, a real dirt farmer, making a living out of the land through his own ability, and we could not help but think what a wonderful thing it is that a genuine farmer could within a dozen years or thereabouts become premier of this great province of Ontario. As we drove away, over as bad a road as you will find anywhere, we noted that the premier evidently enjoyed no special favors from his township in the matter of roads.

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville

"In Company With Spring"

As I looked out of the window this morning, my glance fell on my perennial border.

Often through the winter I'd looked at it as it lay, either piled high with snow or heavy with dank, fallen leaves.

This morning I sensed a difference—surely my eyes did not receive me—no, there were tiny specks of green showing in two or three places.

So, presently, I wandered out, in company with the lovely spring morning, seven cats and a rake.

The cats went first, led by Susan the Suspicious.

Susan, like Kipling's cat, usually "walks by her wild lone," and imagines every man's hand is against her.

Her sense of hearing is abnormal; for, no matter where she may be, if she hears a certain drawer, in which reposes the carving knife, open, Susan materializes, apparently out of thin air, and sits expectantly waiting her meat. However this morning, shedding her usual caution, she indulged in some games of leap-frog with the young fry, while I set to work with my rake—or tried to.

Cautiously lifting the leaves round the tips of green, I found that my iris was lifting their heads from beneath their blanket.

Of course, seeing I was interested in some particular thing, Puff, the youngest of the flock, after examining the little green circle, promptly lay down on it. Skippy, next in age, taking a mean advantage of my stooping posture, danced a sort of wild fandango on my back.

No matter how carefully I raked, I took off some little green forks, and could have wept over the brave little heads lying amongst the debris, but the longer I waited the more damage I was sure to do.

Coming to the front of the house I looked at the spot where my tulips lie snug through the long cold months—and see little cones of green shot with rose were poking up, to let the sun unfurl their little umbrellas.

I did not dare linger too long over any of them for, if I did, my faithful attendants would immediately give them more attention than was healthful for them.

But one feels optimistic; and one dreams dreams.

Don't we all have dreams and visions in the spring? It wouldn't seem right otherwise.

For myself, I look at the house and think of the long new window I want in the living-room to let in more morning sun.

I've wanted that window for a long time and I don't suppose I'm any nearer getting it this spring than last, but I can dream about it and imagine the effect of a great flood of sunshine in the room.

If one's imagination is in good working order, it's almost as if one had one's dream for the time being.

All the time I am wandering about, attended by my faithful retinue of yellow, black, grey and cream colored cats, I am conscious of a delightful odor and, as I near the kitchen door, it is as fragrant as apple blossoms.

It's the pile of newly cut apple wood that will glow in our open fire on cool evenings this summer and perfume our rooms—there is no fire like an apple wood fire.

Altogether, there is something utterly indescribable about our Canadian April mornings.

The sap is turning the boughs of the apple trees red; the fat buds are swelling on the chestnuts; the lilacs are putting on their russet bonnets and everywhere there is a pushing and thrusting of hidden life toward the sun. It's spring!

Nineteen would-be bridegrooms in South America petitioned the court at Bello Horizonte to compel justices of the peace to marry them. The justices, they said, were sitting down in their offices, striking against "low pay."

A bylaw has been passed forbidding cows to pasture on the streets of the village of Haliburton. "They tend to tie up traffic and slow down business," according to the village fathers.

"Americans can only envy the example of courage set by the government of Ontario in warding off the same crisis," an editorial in the New York American stated last week, commenting on the stand taken by the government in handling the Oshawa strike.

Customers of a Chinese restaurant in New York City were three hold-up men so effectively with chop suey, chow mein and other food that the men gave up the robbery and fled.

Government employees in a German province were ordered on Monday to wed by Nov. 1 or lose their jobs. "Among officials there must be the same eagerness to found families as among laborers," the order stated.

Big Game Hunter—"Oh, yes, I've been nearly eaten by lions many times, but life without a little risk would be very tame."

Little Man—"I agree, many times, when the weather has seemed doubtful, I have gone without my umbrella."

STRIKE

What the developments in Oshawa may be in the five days between time of writing and delivery of this column I cannot forecast. What unreported aspects there may be underlying the present labor situation I do not know. In fact, my attempt to form an opinion on the whole question is, I confess, handicapped quite as much as that of the average citizen. I am only prompted to discuss the subject because of certain underlying principles which bear on the case.

The trend of a section of opinion that is clearly sympathetic to big business is reflected in the following editorial comment—"The Provincial Prime Minister has stated that United States motor manufacturers are ready to spend $10,000,000 here in plants to care for export trade if they can get a square deal. Obviously the Lewis organization will move heaven and earth to prevent a development which might interfere with its program in the States. The simple question for Canadian workers to consider is whether they stand for Lewis and his political ambitions or for Canada and their own prosperity."

One might question the intended meaning of "a square deal for motor manufacturers." Is a "square deal" for capital the right to hire and fire employees at random and to make and sell motor cars with the greatest possible profit and the least possible governmental interference? One might very well believe that the march of labor and the progress of government in our neighboring republic is partially responsible for the proposed movement of industry northward.

The quotation regarding the choice of Canadian workers between Lewis and Canada would infer that there is some magical connection between American capital and Canadian patriotism. Undoubtedly industrial development in Canada would tend to build for national prosperity of a sort. It would help to absorb a section of our unemployed and give a general stimulus to business.

But may not labor organize in defense of its interests? And if great American companies are welcomed to Canada and associated with our national loyalties why should not American labor leaders also organize in Canada? If large scale organization on the part of capital is justifiable, one cannot deny labor the same right.

Some caustic wit has suggested that "a lot of the people who do so much talking about capital and labor never had any capital and never did any labor." Be that as it may, the place that I would find fault with in such discussion is that it ignores the community, the general social organization which provides both capital and labor with a place in which to function. Why are there motor car factories and why do people work in them? Is not use the ultimate justification for production? Unless people were able to drive cars would cars be manufactured?

I belong to the people who find automobiles a convenience and a necessary part of life as we know it. In one form or another, I must provide money for their purchase and upkeep. Everyone pays indirectly even if he does not drive a car himself. One cannot ignore the effects of industrial bickerings on the price of the finished product. The great mass of our population must have purchasing power if industrial output is to find an outlet.

Chips and Cora Go House-Hunting

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"The Phobes are back," announced one of the Chickadees to a group of Chickadees, Juncos and Nuthatches who were disporting themselves on the edge of the woods one April afternoon. "I just heard one of them calling 'fee-bee, fee-bee, fee-bee,' as I came over here. I've just been over on Millard Ave., chatting with a bunch of Goldfinches who were eating over there."

"With so many newcomers arriving, I don't think it would be a bad idea for us to begin looking for a nice, cosy little home for this spring, Cora, my love," chirped Chips, the Chickadee, into his wife's ear. "If we don't hurry all the best places will be taken."

"We certainly must," his spouse agreed. "And we must begin building, too. We Chickadees are always nesting before the end of April and this is the middle of the month already. Have you seen any spot that would suit us?"

"I wondered what you would think of using the hole that Mr. and Mrs. Pecker nested in last year," said Chips. "It's in a very nice spot, right near the woods, and Mr. and Mrs. Pecker always claimed that they had nice neighbors. Of course, they won't be using it this year."

"Well, it's certainly in a fine residential district there beside the woods and on the edge of a meadow," said Cora, "and no doubt the children would have nice companions. It's a trifle farther from town than we were last year, but the children wouldn't have so many rough Starling and English Sparrow youngsters to bully them. That vulgar gang are such a bad influence that it's worth the inconvenience of the longer distance."

"I saw a possible spot in an old hollow fence post, but I really think you'd like the Woodpeckers' deserted home better," Chips responded. "It's about 12 feet from the ground in a small dead apple tree and very roomy. Let's go over and inspect it."

When Mr. and Mrs. C. Chickadee arrived at the apple tree, Chips allowed Cora to go inside and look around first. She stayed inside quite a while but finally her little black cap appeared out of the hole and she made her pronouncement.

"I think it will do very nicely," she stated. "I'll have to ask Mrs. Pecker about dampness and whether it is draughty, but it looks all right. Of course, we will have to line it with nice soft grasses and moss and feathers. It must be made a lot snuggler and cosier than Mrs. Pecker had it. She lays her eggs right on the wood, with just the few shavings that fall in when they chisel out the hole, to soften it. That would never do for us."

"Well, I'm glad you're satisfied, my love," beamed Chips. "I guess it's all settled, if you say so, but I may as well take a peak too. It amuses me to think that Pecker worked hard making this hole—and now we get the benefit of his work. I must announce to all and sundry that we claim this is our territory and that no one must build too near us."

"Do let's start looking for nice stuff to line our home with," chirped Cora eagerly. "We simply must have a dab or two of fur in our nest this year. It will mean just that little extra touch that makes a Chickadee nest really well furnished."

"House-hunting was certainly easy this year," Chips murmured to himself. "It took much longer to find something to suit Cora last spring."

Notes . . . To You

A Note Of Protest

For the past month our mouth has been resounding with the noise of dentist's drills, picks, and hammers. Cavities have been filled, some teeth have been crowned and some permanently deformed. Our mouth has been held open so long that it's beginning to stay that way, and we are seriously considering placing a screen in front of it before the fly season starts.

However, by next fall—when the cooler weather shall have killed off all the flies—we expect to be smiling like a toothpaste advertisement. Then the femininity of all Newmarket will be failing at our feet.

Before they start falling though, we would like to utter a protest—and it comes from the dentist, not from us. We hope you don't mind. It seems that dentists do not like lipstick. But not for the usual reasons.

Lipstick, my dentist confides, does not always stick to the lips. It gets on the dentist's fingers. It appears in large crimson blotches on the bib tied under the patient's chin. Which bothers the dentist so.

"Sometimes, when I look on the bespattered bib, I think I've cut the patient's throat," was the way our dentist summed up the matter. And cutting throats is not a dentist's job. One should call a surgeon for that.

A Questioning Note

We'd like to pursue this lipstick business a little farther. Even our mother, who knows almost everything, and our father, who reads a lot, have been unable to tell us the reason for lipstick.

Father believes that the ladies use it to please him, but says they can stop it any time, so far as he's concerned. The ladies, on the other hand, deny any intention of pleasing father, or anyone else. They just happen to have some on, that's all.

It was left to Little Nell, the lady whom we hope will some day become Mrs. We, to tell us the truth. Little Nell believes she speaks for all womankind when she says, "We eat it—it makes a nice snack between meals."

A Note To Our Landlady

The house in which we are fortunate enough to sleep and eat is, even to our serious mind, a very fount of jollity. Even on rainy days, the place fairly reeks with merriment. And lately it has added to its entertainment value with another non-paying guest in the person of a very young dog whose first name is Alfred.

Alfred's last name is unknown, his family background uncertain, and he has the darndest ideas. But one thing is sure—Alfred will not go hungry. The other day, when we thought Alfred was out of earshot, someone explained that whereas Alfred, as a growing pup, now needed three meals a day, on the attainment of manhood he would have to get along on one.

Unfortunately, Alfred overheard the remark. His back stiffened, his whiskers bristled and a look of cold determination crept into his pale green eyes as he said, "I shall refuse to grow up!"

Someone, we fear, has been telling Alfred about Peter Pan.

Note Of Absolute Disgust

We don't suppose you've noticed, but this column has not been appearing in Northern York County's leading newspaper for the past four weeks. We just sneaked out of the office one evening and slunk out to Winnipeg for a month.

A few days ago we arrived back and sneaked into the office again. Nobody said anything, and it began to look as if we had got away with it. Unfortunately, however, our town contemporary noted our absence and slammed the news of our return into their society column. We thank them for the compliment, but wish to goodness they had skipped it. The boss has found out we're back and has given us some work to do. Our holiday is over.

An Oriental Note

An alleged friend has passed on a fact, which, if true, is altogether strange. It appears that our friend was purchasing—of all things—a pair of chopsticks for his wife. It seems his wife likes chopsticks. The Chinese who waited on him inquired if the chopsticks were for a gentleman or for a lady.

It was important, he said, that he know which. Our friend wanted to know what difference it made. The Chinaman told him.

Ladies may use the ordinary bamboo sticks or bone chopsticks and nothing unusual happens. Ivory chopsticks, however, may be used only by men. Why? Because, if used by ladies, they turn black. The Chinese gentleman could not give a reason, but pointed out that Chinese who were afraid someone might attempt to poison their food, always used the ivory chopsticks, as these would show the presence of the poison by turning black.

The inference, we assume, is that women are poison to the Chinese, too.

A Precautionary Note

The editor of the Kirkland Lake Northern News, evidently a gentleman with the best interests of his readers at heart, advises, "No, we wouldn't discard them yet, even if the weather is getting mild!"

TO THE EDITOR

Editor, The Era: I am enclosing two dollars for the renewal of my subscription to your paper. I enjoy it very much. It is certainly superior to those published by other towns of about the same size. The editorials are unusually interesting and worthwhile.

Yours truly,
JANET M. SPARLING.
Picton, Ont., Apr. 6, 1937.
(Mrs. Sparling was formerly Miss Janet Thomson of the Newmarket high school staff.)

Editor, The Era: The enclosed clippings, showing Rev. Alexander Mackenzie performing a marriage ceremony in his hospital wheel chair, will be interesting to many of your subscribers, as he was pastor of the Newmarket Christian church for several years, 20 years ago, and still has many friends there.

Mr. Mackenzie has a record as a marrying clergyman in East Rochester's First Baptist church, being a favorite not only with the young couples but also with the older ones.

When in Newmarket, Mr. Mackenzie was deservedly popular with young and old, all classes and creeds, and took a great interest in town sports. Mrs. Mackenzie, with her musical ability and cheery presence, was also a favorite and it was with regret that their friends there learned of their decision to return to the United States.

Before leaving Newmarket, not only their church people honored them with celebrations and gifts, but the townspeople, laity and clergy alike, joined in presenting a magnificent watch to Mr. Mackenzie as a token of appreciation for his activities in civic matters. The late Father Wedlock made the presentation.

If any of his friends care to write him, "Strong Memorial Hospital, Rochester, N. Y.," will be his address for some time yet. I know he will appreciate hearing from any friends of former days.

Thanking you for this way of bringing former residents to the minds of your townspeople, I am
Sincerely yours,
MRS. E. M. HANCE,

School Notes

TIDINESS (By Pedagogue)

Passing by a rural school last week we observed the yard to be in quite a slovenly condition. Sticks, small and large, rags and paper here and there, and even a broom lying out at the front. Whom should we blame, the scholars, the janitor, or the teacher? Perhaps they are waiting for Arbor Day to clean up. It will be the first Friday in May. An inspector visiting a certain school remarked that Arbor Day was kept every day here. Said he, "I find things always ship-shape."

A ten-year-old boy was asked about his teacher. "Oh," said he, "we have the greatest crank of a teacher. We must arrange our books just so in our desks. If a bit of paper or pencil clipping gets on the floor we must pick it up. If he sees a little stick or piece of paper in the yard he sends one of us after it."

MAPLE HILL BAPTISTS PLAN SPECIAL EVENT

On Apr. 25 the sixth anniversary of Maple Hill Regular Baptist church will be held with preaching services both morning and evening. Special music is being planned for both services. It is expected that Rev. Fleisher will speak. Mr. Fleisher will be remembered by many for his splendid services last anniversary and all will be anxious to hear him again.

The hour of service is to be changed on Sunday. The Sunday-school will meet at 10.45 a.m. with classes for all ages. In the evening the regular evangelistic gospel service will be held at 7.30 p.m. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

6TH CON. N. G. EXPECT SHORT SYRUP SEASON

The raw wind from the north appears to have subsided. Some say the ice in Lake Simcoe has moved a little. When open water is in place of ice a warmer wave may be expected.

Wood-sawing is pretty well over and it is thought by some that the syrup-season is to be short as buds are showing.

Mr. Ormie Willoughby shipped out two good-sized young beehives and a calf on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ardill are on their way to recovery.

Mrs. Perry Graves is under the doctor's care as the result of a cold.

Mr. Milton Fairbairn was among the young people on Sunday and also Freddie Cooper, who got home in time to bring his mother to church.

Spring birds are here and seem very happy, spying out their future homes.

Mr. John Shaw, near Belhaven, who has been poorly for some time, is reported as being very low and sympathy is felt for the family.

Miss Florence Fairbairn of Toronto was among the visitors at the morning service at Bethel on Sunday morning. The size of the regular congregation was somewhat improved after so much sickness.

Some are still among the shut-ins.

Rev. T. V. Hart will preach at this appointment next Sabbath morning at 11 a.m. This is his last service as minister of Bethel. Friends are sorry to lose Mr. Hart but wish success to him and to the labors in his new mission field.

The new supply, Mr. Butler, expects to take the work the following Sunday. As an earnest worker, he comes to this field expecting sympathy and co-operation in his work.

The friends have shown themselves true to their ministers in the past and are resolved to continue.

MORE PROPERTY

CHANGES HANDS

With the coming of spring both farm and town lands are changing hands more rapidly, E. A. Boyd, Newmarket real estate broker, told The Era this week.

Cliff Playter's farm on the second concession of Whitechurch has been sold to E. P. Williamson of the Newmarket Dairy. Mr. Williamson took possession on April 1.

Ross Gurnsey of Beaverton came into possession of Archie Sedore's farm on Saturday. The property is located on the fourth concession, North Gwillimbury township.

The farm owned and operated by G. W. Rogers for the past five years, and formerly owned by the Geo. Fairbairn estate, has been purchased by Claire E. Brandt of Toronto. The Rogers farm is situated on concession 2, East Gwillimbury.

The house and lot at 7 D'Arcy St., adjoining Memorial Park, has been purchased by Alfred Elpinstone, Newmarket, from the Creasor estate.

job or in the manufacture of material," Mr. Irwin declared, pointing out that in no other way could a comparable stimulus be given to business and employment.

"Under a similar scheme between one and a half and two billions of dollars were spent in the United States in two years," Mr. Irwin said. "In Canada it is expected to put 60,000 families back on the pay-rolls through this plan."

"Too much emphasis has been placed on the loan part of this plan," he said. "Loans will account for only one-quarter to one-third of the total amount of money spent as a result of the launching of this plan. Most of the work will be done by people who do not need to borrow money. But the loans will enable other people who have incomes but no savings to go ahead with home improvements, and to save money that might otherwise be wasted. There will be $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 spent, as the result of this plan, in Canada in the next year or two.

"For those who borrow money from the banks the money is discounted at 3 1/2 per cent. This means that if a man borrowed $100 to be repaid in a year he would get $96.75 cash from the bank. He would repay it in monthly instalments of $8.33 and at the end of the year he would owe the bank nothing. But as he has some of the money for only a month, and some of it for only two months, and so on, the actual interest rate is a little over six per cent. This is the lowest rate of interest for this type of loan available anywhere in the world today."

"The farmer under the act does not have to pay money back monthly but when he gets it, for instance, at harvest time. He is allowed more latitude."

"But I repeat that the loan side of this plan is too much emphasized. There will be $3 or $4 spent for every dollar borrowed. There will be $50,000,000 borrowed from the banks, that is, the amount authorized by the federal government and guaranteed to the extent of 15 per cent, and there will be $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 spent."

"If people see their neighbors fixing up their houses, they will fix up their own," Dr. Boyd said, giving the project his approval, although he said he was critical of encouraging people to borrow money.

"If people don't spend their money this way, they will waste it," declared P. W. Pearson, ex-mayor. "It is a most excellent idea. I fully agree that there will be $3 to $4 spent to every $1 borrowed."

was prepared to give the first award to Poplar Bank's performance on its merits, but perhaps really because this club is nearest home.

"While the general level of acting is good, the tremendous amount of energy used could have been applied to better advantage to better plays," Mr. Dean said Tuesday evening.

"If you want slapstick, you can get good slapstick - you don't have to go to burlesque," Mr. Dean said. "If you want tragedy, you don't have to go to melodrama of the nineties."

"I am ready to suggest plays, and I hope to meet you again next fall. The better plays are just as easy to do, and you will enjoy them more."

Entertainers for the two evenings were Williamson Bros., Victoria Square, cowboy singers; Miss Edith Sloan, Vellore, tap dancer; Miss Olive Niles, Poplar Bank, elocutionist; and little Miss Valliere Hunter, Nobleton, singer and dancer.

Wm. Champion, Unionville, county president of the Junior Farmers Association, was chairman. W. M. Cockburn, county agricultural representative, arranged the festival. Joseph McCulley, headmaster of Pickering College, welcomed the groups to Pickering.

A detailed report of Mr. Dean's interesting criticisms of the six plays will be given as an article on amateur drama in The Era next week.

children in the parade and feature the singing of the pupils at the park. Speakers will be asked to be brief, in order that the children need not be kept standing too long.

Present plans, which are subject to the approval of the council, would have the parade start on Huron St. and proceed down Main St. to the park. In the event of rain, the town hall will be used.

Jack Hallam was the unanimous choice of the committee for the post of parade marshal. The service at the park will begin at 10.30 a.m., to permit those attending to take part in the county celebration at Aurora if they wish.

Both public and high school pupils will be busy for the next few weeks, practising the singing of "The Maple Leaf" and "O Canada," as is planned to include these in the service. The massed singing will be accompanied by the local bands.

The religious part of the service, it was believed, could be left for the ministerial association to arrange. The committee meets in the council chambers again tonight to form more detailed arrangements.

SPANISH AIRS, MUSIC

Following the usual business proceedings, Mrs. Young briefly reviewed the origin and character of Spanish music, telling how the Moorish invasion has influenced the folk songs of the people which had come, primarily, from Asiatic and African sources, thus accounting for the wild rhythmic beat of all Spanish airs.

Spain has its love lyrics, flower songs and its folk lore, all of a very rugged nature but carrying a beautiful melody. These have been perpetuated by gypsy bands who traverse the country. They were beautifully demonstrated by little Helen Lloyd and Hazel McBride of Snowbird singing "Juanita" as a duet.

Jack Peppiatt played "La Paloma" (The Dove), written by Sebastian Yradier of Spain.

While Spain has failed to produce any classical music and practically no famous composer, "Carmencita," which characterizes a type of Spanish lady, was written by an English composer. This old song was beautifully rendered by Miss Hazel McBride, accompanied by Mrs. Young.

The "Bandalero," exemplifying the outlaws and highwaymen of Spain, was sung by G. C. Young in his usual very fine style.

Coming to the realm of modern music, Valencia, which is perhaps the best known, was brilliantly played by Bert Playter, bringing the musical part of the evening to a close. The program was intensely interesting and entertaining.

Mrs. W. H. Eves moved a vote of thanks congratulating Mrs. Young and her assistants on the very efficient manner in which they had portrayed music in Spain.

A dainty buffet luncheon was served in the dining-room. The table, bright with spring flowers, was presided over by Mrs. W. H. Eves and Mrs. H. M. Hooker.

GRACE MOORE AND CARY GRANT, AT
PALACE THEATRE

Can you picture Grace Moore singing "Minnie The Moocher," with appropriate gestures? You don't believe it? Well, trot right down to the Palace theatre where her new picture, "When You're In Love," opens Friday and Saturday this week and take a look. Take a few looks—it's one of the best films you've ever seen.

Besides singing "Minnie" the opera star beautifully renders such masterpieces as Schubert's "Serenade," "One Fine Day" from "Madame Butterfly," "Siboney," "Vissie Darte" from La Tosca, the "Waltz Aria" from Romeo and Juliet, and "In The Gloaming." All these are in addition to two excellent new numbers of Jerome Kern, "Our Song" and "Whistling Boy."

Miss Moore is perfectly supported with a grand story by Robert Riskin. Cary Grant is just right as an American artist, while other roles are dealt with skilfully by a competent cast of well-known players.

The story concerns an Australian opera star who is forced to leave America when her passport expires. Going to Mexico in a desperate attempt to "phenagle" her way back in order to sing at an important festival, her scheme falls through. As a last resort, she becomes a citizen by marrying an American artist, to whom she pays a large sum of money. From then on, it's anybody's fight, with the audience always winning.

TO VISIT CORONATION

Taking part in a Manx homecoming, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Elphinstone and their two sons, Robert and Francis, expect to visit London at the time of the coronation. Mr. Elphinstone is an orderly at York County Hospital and has secured three months leave of absence.

Mr. and Mrs. Elphinstone will go direct to the Isle of Man, where Mr. Elphinstone was born, and will visit London on a coronation excursion, returning to the Isle of Man. Subsequently they will visit Irish Free State, where Mrs. Elphinstone was born, returning again to the Isle of Man before returning home.

Mr. Elphinstone first came to Newmarket in 1913, farming until he went overseas. He was married here after the war. They will sail on Friday, April 30, travelling on the Athenia.

CHAPTER 32

"It's boiling, Allie!"
Alix sighed patiently and put down her pencil.
"Bill Boyd, you're a menace to industry. If you hadn't come by, I'd have had all the bills out for the month. This is a business organization, not a tea room."
"And you're a human being, not a machine. It's half past five and time you called it a day. Besides, I've brought you a special treat—tea cakes from the Goodie Shop."
"All right," she said, changing from a crumpled green smock to a fresh rose smock, "if you don't care whether I get to look like a good healthy corn-fed gal."
"You couldn't ever look that way," he said gallantly as he watched her busying herself over the small tea table beside the blazing hearth in the shop.
Alix had introduced the rite of afternoon tea, among other innovations in Bairdsville, to further intimacy and conversation in the shop. It had led surely to sales, commissions and the growth of Mae Alexander's business. It had led Bill Boyd into the habit of dropping in these late afternoons to chat with Alix and Mae.

"Bill," Alix sipped her hot tea thoughtfully, "I wonder if it would do any good to work old Mr. Holly. He wants to sell that big place of his. I think he'd have a better chance if he spent a little money redecorating the place. I've been going over some plans."
"Alix, darling, if you worked on anybody it would probably mean a sale. I wonder, however, if you would forget it for a few minutes? I'd like to talk over some plans with you for the club party on Washington's birthday."
"On, Bill, I wrote to New York for the suggestions I wanted. I'll get them." She put down her cup and rose.

Bill caught her hand. "Sit down and don't let's talk. Don't say anything. I want to see you for once when you aren't in the middle of plans."
Alix sat down and was quiet for a few minutes. The firelight ran over her figure in repose. Its light marked the line with fluid brightness from her hair to the sheen on her absurdly small, high-heeled patent leather slippers. It picked out the slender contours of her small-boned body in neat black frock, protected with starched smock. It played on her cheeks from which the snadows had disappeared, but it could not mark a light in her eyes because that quick, bright spark had gone.

It had gone when the pain in her heart had been less sharp and the numbness she had schooled herself to had settled deep in her. It was February now. Nearly a year.
"The middle of plans?" She was speaking more to herself than to Bill. "I'm always in the middle of plans." She didn't say that that was one way of shutting out yesterday. "I'm just a business woman, Bill."

Bill had brought a battered pipe out of his pocket. Busily he pressed tobacco into it, he inspected it carefully. "Not to me, Allie. You'll never be anything to me but a romantic lady. All eleven you are so I guess you must be, but to me you're always the girl who has to have her battles fought for her."

She smiled, wryly, "I haven't any battles, Bill."
"Pshaw, I didn't mean that exactly."
"I know what you mean, darling." She put her hand on his. "You've been wonderful to me ever since I came back. I don't know what I'd have done without you."

Gratitude filled her with tenderness for Bill. He had been wonderful! He'd brought his "gang" around. He'd seen that she met everyone. He'd called for her on stormy nights, brought her books and candy when she sprained her ankle and had to stay away from the shop for a week. She'd leaned on Bill more than she knew. And if she wasn't careful she'd spill over and tell him so.

A bell tinkled at their backs, the little bell on the outside door, opening to let in a blast of icy air and Mae Alexander.
"Tea! Oh, I hope there's lots of it and steaming hot. I'm half frozen," that lady called from the door where she removed her goloshes.

"That luck?" Alix called and refilled the copper kettle.
"Hello, Bill," Mae crossed the shop to the hearth and warmed her hands at its blaze. "Alix, you're a miracle worker! Wonderful! Mrs. Penny has gone for the English chintz in a big way and kept me all afternoon planning a room with horsehair furniture and other Victorian gadgets to go with it. Any news here?"

Alix poured a cup of steaming tea. "There certainly is. The Nathaniel girl was in and I tried her on the idea of a Cape Cod cottage."
The older woman looked dubious for a few minutes. Then her brow cleared and she turned to Bill. "Bill, I don't know why I should give it a thought. The idea of a Cape Cod cottage in Iowa does seem incongruous to me but if Alix says it's okay I ought to have you told Bill our figures for this month?"

Alix said she hadn't. "I told him you insisted on giving me a raise," was all she said.
"Richly deserved, too. Alix has made this into a real paying business and she ought to have some reward. She's a miracle worker."
Alix responded: "Nonsense. It's easy when you know how. Most people are afraid they'll have to pay an

"I'm just a business woman, Bill."

interior decorator a huge sum. They don't know that we get the profits from the sales, legitimate profits. We haven't gone after real big business but we've done well with our branches of curtain making, renovating furniture and all that." Alix dismissed her big business modestly. "Then we've made a nice little thing out of entertaining at tea parties and all that, which reminds me, Bill, I've still got to get those bills out, so you run along and come for me around eight and we'll see that movie."

"Alix, I've been thinking about something," Mae said thoughtfully when Bill had left and they lingered over their tea. "I'm getting worried about you."
"About me?" Surprise heightened Alix's words.

"Yes, I'm afraid you're going to get tired of us and Bairdsville. After all, you've had New York and you've come out here and done a wonderful job. How long are you going to want to stay here?"

Alix felt something inside her do a heavy dive into the pit of her stomach. "Don't! You want me to stay here?"
"Of course, I do. In fact, in another year when I get out of debt, I thought I might offer you a partnership, but sometimes I don't think you are happy here in Bairdsville."

Alix didn't answer her for a minute. "I think it's pretty nice of you, Mae, to say that you might do that but forget it. For my not being happy here, what makes you think I'm not?"
Mae poured hot water into her cup, swished it around and emptied it. Then she gathered up some stray crumbs and her face grew flushed but she didn't speak.

"Go on," Alix said quietly. "You can't fool me, Mae. There's something on your mind."
Mae began painfully. "I oughtn't to say it, Alix, and maybe I ought to. I don't know. But I see you aren't always the same. You're one way with me and people you know and like and you're another way with some other people. I saw broke off awkwardly."

"Perhaps you mean I'm reserved?"
Mae seized that eagerly. "Yes, that's what I mean. You've been invited everywhere and it's good business to go to bridge parties and teas and things like that."
Alix stared into the fire. "I know what you mean, Mae, and I'm glad to have a chance to talk about it. I am reserved for a good reason. Maybe I'm wrong, but when I'm with those girls I have a feeling that they are watching me, oh, very politely! But watching nonetheless and I'm invited not because they want me but because they are polite. Why? What have I done?"

She lifted unhappy eyes to the older girl.
"Honey, forget that. It's because you're because you're from New York, because you're prettier than any girl here, because all the men go for you and because..."
"And because what?" Alix waited.

Mae got up and gathered the cups. "Oh, pay no attention. Out here it sometimes takes a long time for people to get to know you're one of us. Just forget it. She turned her back to Alix."

CHAPTER 33

Alix watched Mae put the cups away, tidy the top of the maple table and put the spoons in their proper place. Then she persisted, "And because of what, Mae, are the people in Bairdsville watching me?"
Mae faced her helplessly. "Alix, I'm going to ask you a personal question. Why did you come back to Bairdsville?"
"Oh, so that's it?" Alix looked back at her while an idea grew in her mind.

"I don't know what you're thinking," Mae said quickly, "but if you think that everyone here thinks you came back because of some scandal, you're wrong. Let me ask you another question: How do you feel about Bill Boyd?"
Alix hadn't the least idea what was in Mae's mind. She was still thinking of her first startled surprise.

"Bill? Oh I think he's sweet.

Mac, he's been to me..." she looked away.
"I see," Mae found something to do in the cupboard. "Then, don't you worry about anything. Money. We all think Bill is sweet. He's done more good deeds in this town than anybody else and we all want him to be happy. Why, we put up the money for this shop when he had a pretty good idea he'd never see it again and..."
"Mae," Alix ran her fingers through her hair as though to clear away the cobwebs that formed about a new idea that still puzzled her. "Is it about Bill? I mean, does it have something to do with him?"

"I'm not ever going to say any more about it, Mae, except that we're both making a mountain out of a molehill. Everybody likes you, everybody wants you to be happy, everybody wants Bill to be happy, so you just go right on accepting invitations and make up your mind that you're all right. By the way, did you see the envelope that came from Sommers? I guess that's what you've been waiting for."

"Yes, I was waiting for it. It has some suggestions for the holiday party. Mae, I want to see you something else. Something I didn't ever tell anyone, not even Bill."
"You don't have to," she answered kindly.

"I want to, I guess it did seem pretty funny to you that I'd want to leave a good job and a good salary in New York to come back here. I was running away. I couldn't stay there any more because New York reminded me of something I wanted to forget. It's all over now forever and I've started a new life and I'm going to live it right here. Do you want to know what I'm running away from?"

Mae put her arm around Alix's shoulders and squeezed them hard. "No, I don't want to know. I just want you to feel that this is a good place to start a new life. Anything you do is all right with me."

"Anything you do is all right with me!"
Mae's words came back to Alix occasionally and brought a perplexed frown to her brow. What had Mae expected her to do? Or were her words merely idle? There was something that Mae hadn't told her and she knew she never would.

"I guess I'm getting introspective, too self-conscious. I'm going to stop putting too much importance on my own reactions to people. Perhaps all these things I feel are simply born in my imagination because I'm developing an inferiority complex." These were the things she said to herself.

She lived much within herself, bringing out her memories only infrequently and then feeling a surge of longing to hear of Kathleen, to hear something of John Sayre.

And as though that longing unconsciously guided her to pick up a Chicago paper in the train when she was on her way to Des Moines on business for the shop, she saw his name.

And Carol Cushing's. Carol Cushing was going to Hollywood under contract to the Mutual Picture company. A scout from the studio had declared her to be the most beautiful girl in New York society and had signed her to a long contract. She was flying to the coast aboard the private plane of Mr. William O'Leary. Others in the party included Mrs. O'Leary, Mr. and Mrs. Desmond Robertson and Mr. John Sayre.

So Carol had been right. She was engaged to John Sayre, else why would he be flying to the coast with her? And when in the name of heaven did Carol want a career for when she could have John Sayre? What manner of fool was she? The wonder of her unspoken questions twisted and writhed Alix Carey's heart where a torrent of memories of a dark face, a tender voice, the motions of a hundred movements awoke anew.

Put him away forever. Tell yourself he never existed. There never was a winter in New York. There has been only this Alix Carey since time began.

on her face to tell you that she had passed the last outpost of the place she had left behind her.
The train that bore her back to Bairdsville was two hours late. There was a raging blizzard outside and the train was chilly. Alix, huddled in her fur coat, woolen mittens and warm woolen stockings, felt the cold making her bones as numb as the thing that beat in her breast.

She felt a little desperate as the train crept on and thought with flashes of desperate, trapped incoherencies that all her life would be like this—cold journeys to strangers. She wished then for the first time since she had left New York that she was returning to the bright warmth of it.

It was midnight when the train pulled in. Alix alighted from the steps to the freshly swept path on the platform. Through the thick falling snow she made out the lights of two or three cars, the warm light of the railroad station and hoped that there would be a taxi at the station to take her to her home.

She blinked the snow from her eyes and tried to peer into the white space. Then she felt a reassuring hand on her arm.

"Oh, Bill, you angel!"
"I thought you might have trouble getting home," he said, as he tucked her under a rug in his car. "I told you you needed someone to look after you. Why didn't you stay in Des Moines?"
"I had to get back. We have to make some deliveries tomorrow morning."

Tomorrow is a holiday, Alix. Have you forgotten our party?"
"Party? Oh, of course, I haven't forgotten." But she had.
"I won't come in with you because it's late and I want you to get your beauty sleep. I'll come for you at eight-thirty. It's going to be a great party."

"I'm sure it is," she said, wishing there was life in her voice. It didn't seem to matter that there was none in the rest of her.

The following day Miss Lizzie Ellis carefully observed Alix dress for the Washington's birthday costume dinner dance. Alix, in a brocade gown, tied a blue ribbon around her powdered hair. "Like it?" she asked, twirling around.

"You look lovely, Allie. I want to see you, when Dorcas goes to tell me what everybody Hill went with Bill, she wore a Puritan costume and won the prize. My, she looked nice! Dorcas was going with Bill then and he was mighty proud of her. Well, I guess what's going to be is going to be." She sighed, but Alix, busy with a comb, paid no attention.

She thought of it later. There were Martha Washingtons, Daniel Boones, Puritans, Indians, a pirate or two, Redcoats and what-nots at the party. There were colored balloons, crackers, highballs, toasts, serenades, a blaring orchestra, punch, a supper dance, confidences and quarrels. It was a typical country club party.

Alix went to look for Bill for the supper dance. She had stayed close to his side throughout the evening, smiling at him and with him, wishing she could feel.

She looked for him among the dancers, in the crowded groups. He was not to be found. She threaded her way through the crowd to the door of the dim-lit library.

She saw him there. There were only two of them in the library—Bill and the girl in a gray Puritan garb. The girl sat erect facing him. Bill sat forward speaking earnestly.

Alix stepped back and retraced her steps. The girl was Dorcas Hill. What was it Miss Lizzie had said about her? And why was it she had sighed?

BOARDING SCHOOL IN INDIA DESCRIBED BY N. H. S. GIRL

Members of the Christian Endeavor of the Friends church met to hear Miss Evelyn McTavish speak on India on Monday.

Evelyn McTavish is now attending the Newmarket high school. She spent seven years in a boarding school in India, and her talk about her experiences while there was most interesting to all. Other numbers of the program consisted of a delightful piano solo by Miss Elsie Harden, reading by Miss Alice Harden, and another musical number by Fred Slater.

Next Monday, a splendid program is planned. Mrs. Harden will speak and special music will be provided.

Mother—"What happened when that high-pressure salesman called today?"
Daughter—"Oh, I sold him father's old clothes and all the discarded furniture in the attic."

"TIRED" ALL THE TIME
She felt miserable—dragg—low in vitality—lower in spirits. She hadn't thought of her kidneys, until a friend suggested Dodd's Kidney Pills. At once she took Dodd's. The "washed out" feeling was soon replaced by clear headed energy and restful sleep. Headache, backache, lassitude and other signs of faulty kidneys disappeared. 112

DISCUSS WELFARE OF COMMUNITY

Every local church is a part of a community. It is made up of members of the community and shares in the give and take of community life. Community problems of all kinds are matters of vital concern to the church. The good church member is anxious to help his church serve the community.

Christian Endeavorers, next Tuesday night at 8:00 p.m. in the Christian-Congregational church, are going to discuss the question of how they may serve the community best—and learn what it really means to be community-minded.

FORMER ATHLETE ALMOST A CRIPPLE

Now "Right As Rain" After Taking Kruschen
Read this letter from an athlete, telling how he obtained relief from rheumatic pains:
"My knees were so stiff with a kind of rheumatoid trouble that I could only rise from a chair with pain and difficulty. This had been growing worse and worse for about two years. It was all the more galling because in my young days I had played for two counties at football and held my college record for the 100 and 220 yards. Naturally I tried all sorts of embrocation, but with absolutely no perceptible effect. Then I decided to try Kruschen Salt and to cut a long story short, I am now as right as rain."
—W. S. T.
The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently due to deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. Kruschen helps to stimulate the excretory organs to healthy, regular activity, and so enables them to eliminate this excess acid from the system.

LOWER PRICES EFFECTIVE APRIL 18th Bray's "Xtra Profit" Chicks

With Higher Hatches and Lower Hatching Costs, We Can Offer You "Xtra-Profit" Chicks for April or May Delivery At Prices We May Not Be Able To Duplicate in Next 10 Years

It's an ill wind that blows nobody good. The mild weather of the past winter is responsible for the abnormally high egg production that has held prices down to low levels. But that same mild weather is responsible for unusually high hatchability—which means lower hatching costs. As a result, we can now offer you chicks of our "Xtra-Profit" grade, for immediate delivery, at prices no higher than you would expect to pay for ordinary chicks. There's an opportunity here that we may not be able to offer you again in the next 10 years.

Unless I am badly mistaken, there never was a more promising time to get into high-quality poultry. I think we're going to see eggs high and feed much lower by early fall. I can't remember when we have had two years of general feed shortage in succession, and I don't think there are going to be nearly as many hens or pullets as usual in the country next fall. Many yearling hens have been sold off already, and a lot of in-and-outers are staying OUT of chickens this season. So get a flock of these vigorous, rapid-developing money-makers, and be ready to cash in.

Last Sunday the sermon at the United church was based on the words of Jesus, "Somebody hath touched Me." "The words apply to one who came to Christ with such a faith that if she touched the hem of His garment she would be made whole," said Rev. Amid the many duties of the church there is the one central force—it is Christ and Christ alone."
